Description

Lime and kiwi meet butter, peach pie and nashi pear, trailed by flint and notes of orange blossom, honeysuckle and brioche. Finding the balance between a crisp white wine and a kiss of new oak and rich butter. This chardonnay is the best of both worlds.

“Frosty Bison”

An Early October morning I found these bison grazing. The temperature was in the single digits and no wind. Nearby thermal features created a mist that covered everything and reduced visibility. When I was working up this photo I really wanted to give the viewer the idea of how cold it is. There was frost clinging to everything including the bison. The best way I could convey this was to show this image in Black and white. Completely unfazed by the bitter cold conditions, these bison continued to feed on what grass was left only knowing it would soon be covered by snow.
